

Effects of Exposure of Phthalates and Phthalate Releasers in Cosmetics and Feminine Hygiene Products †

Apoorva Narad ^{1,*}, Sri Bharti ¹

¹ Department of Toxicology, School of Medico-Legal Sciences, National Forensic Sciences University, Gujarat, India; apoorvanarad1912@gmail.com (A.N.); sribharti1998@gmail.com (S.B.);

* Correspondence: apoorvanarad1912@gmail.com (A.N.);

† Presented at Environmental Toxicology: Impact on Human Health (Environ Tox 2021)

Received: 5.11.2021; Revised: 18.11.2021; Accepted: 20.11.2021; Published: 30.11.2021

Abstract: Female cleanliness items are known to be supplies of emollients. Items like tampons, panty liners, wipes, sterile cushions, personal washes, and creams are gotten together with constituents, for example, phthalates, parabens, bisphenols, triclosan, and triclocarban. Studies tell that even though the substance list doesn't refer phthalates, the presence of phthalates was as yet found in the investigation. After much researches it approached that the items had phthalate releasers in them, which prompted the presence of phthalate in the items. Individual consideration items, particularly fragrances, sterile sanitary items, and beauty care products, are flushed with low-weight phthalates, for example, diethyl phthalate (DEP), dibutyl phthalate (DBP), di-iso-butyl phthalate (DIBP). In this poster, we deliver all the past explored information in this field to sum up regarding how and at what degrees phthalates can impact human existence, particularly focusing on the female buyers.

Keywords: phthalate; feminine products; phthalate releasers; dermal toxicity; reproductive health effects; endocrine disruptors.

© 2021 by the authors. This article is an open-access article distributed under the terms and conditions of the Creative Commons Attribution (CC BY) license (<https://creativecommons.org/licenses/by/4.0/>).

Funding

This research received no external funding.

Acknowledgments

This research has no acknowledgment.

Conflicts of Interest

The authors declare no conflict of interest.